CONSTITUTION CRISIS.

SURPRISING DEVELOPMENTS.

REFORM BILL INTRODUCED.

IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

AN EARLY DISSOLUTION.

LONDON, Nov. 16. The Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, and Mr. Crewe, leader of the House of Lords, had an interview with the King, who then returned to Sandringham to-day.

A Cabinet Council was subsequently held.

Further surprises occurred when the House of Lords met.

Lord Lansdowne announced that the House of Lords was ready with its opinion of the second Chamber problem, this being a reduction of membership.

Sir Alexander Archibald-Hood, M.P. (Unions), in the course of a speech yesterday, said that if a dissolution was forced, it would be because the Government was not able to get its Budget except by leave of Mr. Redmond.

AS THE ACTION OF THE LORDS.

DEATH-BED REPENTANCE.

The "Times" in commenting upon the course of events, says that the declaration made by Mr. Asquith on April 14 as to the intentions of the Government is capable of an interpretation not connected with the receiving of guarantees. The Government would be in a stronger position if it resigned after a victorious election because the creation of peers was with-held.

THE PARLIAMENT BILL.

FIRST READING IN THE LORDS.

GOVERNMENT MUST LEAD.

LONDON, Nov. 17. The Parliament Bill was introduced and read for the first time in the House of Lords yesterday.

Lord Lansdowne said: "I am doubtful of the usefulness of discussion without a possibility of amendment, but shall consult my colleagues. We are all ready in a series of meetings whereby the differences between the Houses will be solved in a reasonable and as far as possible amicable manner."

Mr. Asquith himself has referred to the possibility of joint sessions, but the Government is precipitately disengaging Parliament, and presumably drawing the finance of the year into immediate confusion.

The claim of the House of Commons to precedence in finance is not unreasonable if it is reasonably interpreted."

The Earl of Crewe, leader of the House, said: "After the failure of the conference the country would regard another discussion as absolute waste of time. Agreement by arrangement in the course of debate in the House of Lords is no longer feasible. Likewise all proposals for reform of the House of Lords have implied that a dissolution will give it such authority in the eyes of the country that it ought to retain the whole of its present powers."

"You don't know yourselves what you mean by reform. We must deal with you as we are."

The Earl of Rosebery announced that the House must itself affirm the desirability of reform for itself.

Lord Crewe, in answer to the Earl of Balfour of Burgh, said he reserved his reply to the question what he would do regarding the amendment of the bill if the House of Lords read the Parliament Bill the second time.

SCOTTISH DEMAND.

NATIONAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

The Scottish National Committee of members of the House of Commons has resolved that Home Rule for Scotland is an essential element of constitutional reform, and that a final settlement must include national self-government.

It is therefore intended to substitute for the present Home Rule a Scottish State of hereditary status, but such a state cannot be immediately brought into being.

And whereas provision will require hereto to be made by Parliament in a measure defining such substitution for limiting and defining the powers of the new second Chamber, but it is expedient to make such provision as in this Act appears for restricting the existing powers of the House of Lords.

It is therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

"The people are blind," Mr. Kier Hardie said, "to their own interests while they follow the threefold demus of Imperialism, militarism, and Royalism."

As far as this power by the House of Commons shall not affect the operation of this section in the event of the bill being rejected by the House of Lords.

3. And a certificate of the Speaker of the House of Commons given under this Act shall be conclusive for all purposes and shall not be liable to the payment of legal costs.

4. Nothing in this Act shall diminish or qualify the existing rights and privileges of the House of Commons.

Five years shall be substituted for seven years as the time fixed for the maximum duration of Parliament, under the Septennial Act, 1715.

This Act may be cited as the Parliament Act, 1910.

AN EARLY DISSOLUTION.

LONDON, Nov. 16. The Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, and Mr. Crewe, leader of the House of Lords, had an interview with the King, who then returned to Sandringham to-day.

A Cabinet Council was subsequently held.

Further surprises occurred when the House of Lords met.

Lord Lansdowne announced that the House of Lords was ready with its opinion of the second Chamber problem, this being a reduction of membership.

Mr. Asquith himself has referred to the fact that the new House should consist of an adequate representation of the best elements of the existing House, reinforced by the addition of new peers.

It was a sort of according to the in its folds, either a good or bad result.

It was a good result, but it gave the banner to support the new peers.

Mr. LIBERALIS was concerned. At present he was leading a party in the union of which could do justice to the cause.

Mr. KELLY: "That is free Liberalism."

Mr. JAMES: We proceeded to discuss certain recent happenings in the Justice Department. He claimed that the Government had already done enough to warrant the turning out of public meetings on the (Cheers). The first was the removal of Peter Scott, the Attorney-General, to the administration of justice. The second case was that of the man at Balmain who had witnessed the signatures of two prominent statesmen, and who had been dead 45 by the magistrates. Yet the Attorney-General said that this was the only purpose of the Government was to give a chance to the man, which must have shattered the confidence of the whole country. (Cheers.) Mr. PETERS: It was the case of a lunatic.

Mr. G. MILLER: Why didn't your Government deal with it? (Disorder.)

Mr. KELLY: They were cowards.

Mr. PERCY: You were too cowardly to face it.

Mr. JAMES: It would be a case of God help the country if the Justice Department was not properly administered. It had been said that the Government were going to have a minister in charge of this country. (Cheers.)

Mr. PETERS: Who said so? (Disorder.)

Mr. JAMES: If I mistake not, you said so yourself.

Mr. KELLY: They were cowards.

Mr. PERCY: You were too cowardly to face it.

Mr. JAMES: It would be a case of God help the country if the Justice Department was not properly administered. It had been said that the Government were going to have a minister in charge of this country. (Cheers.)

Mr. TREFPEN: Ah, that makes all the difference. You are putting a "thick" in me, I suppose, when you say that the Government is "land nationalised." (Laughter.)

An Opposition voice: Very pretty!

Mr. FELL: How are they going to nationalise Crown lands? Mr. James is right; the Government's general platform or the fighting platform: Which are we to believe?

An hon. member: Oh, believe anything you like.

Mr. JAMES: Yes; that is about it. (Laughter.)

Mr. G. MILLER: We have the country here, who will be happy to have Newcastle in the old country. Newcastle-on-Tyne is the centre of a great coal industry, and great electric power works had been set down at the pit mouths, supplying electric power to manufacturers at a very cheap rate. That electric power had been conveyed by cable into the city. He did not see why, if that had been done, it could not be done in Sydney.

Mr. TREFPEN: That would then be able to use their best profit: they would be using for the profit of the manufacturer and the profit of Newcastle, and so they would be the gainers all round.

Lord and Lady Chelmsford then accompanied the Mayor and Mayoress to lunch at the Great Northern Hotel, where their Excellencies are the guests of the Mayor during their stay.

Mr. NIELSEN: That is so.

Mr. G. MILLER: That means there will be no freshet?

Mr. NIELSEN: That is your construction. (Disorder.)

Mr. JAMES: What do you mean, then?

Mr. NIELSEN: I made a statement as to it last night, and I said then that we had the best right to explain what we mean by our platform.

Mr. JAMES: You mean you have the best right to explain what is expected? (Cheers.)

Mr. NIELSEN: That explanation was made two years ago, and referred to on every platform in the campaign.

Mr. WOOD: And denied by every candidate who stood for election to do so. (Disorder.)

Mr. JAMES: I am not speaking of what you said.

The Speaker appealed to hon. members to cease the run of cross-fire, and to conduct the debate in a decorous fashion.

Mr. JAMES: You concurred with a statement that was made by the Minister for Lands that the Government's removal from office was demanded by the policy of the Minister for Lands.

Mr. NIELSEN: That is so.

Mr. G. MILLER: That means there will be no freshet?

Mr. NIELSEN: That is your construction. (Disorder.)

Mr. JAMES: What do you mean, then?

Mr. NIELSEN: I made a statement as to it last night, and I said then that we had the best right to explain what we mean by our platform.

Mr. JAMES: You have got rid of Inspector-General Carr and that is your next step? (Ministerial laughter.)

Mr. THROWER: To get rid of you. (Ministerial laughter.)

Col. ONSLOW offered his "limited congratulations" to the Premier for having got what he was, as he had on his election platform, a "more or less" programme, and altogether "sensible and go for ratification."

He wanted to know what the Government proposed to do to repel this attack on the platform of the Labour candidate.

Mr. THROWER: As the Attorney-General characterised the action of the Attorney-General in regard to the case of the secretary of the Friends' Church as a "gross disservice" to the Department. He trusted the Minister for Industries and Lands and the Attorney-General would do with him what he had been before the notice of the House last session in connection with trade union strike.

Mr. THROWER: He had a copy of a letter dated March 9, 1900, which had been sent to a man who was then the Government's Minister, and asked what the Government had done to get a man in that position. It said that a cheque for £100 could be forwarded if that would accelerate payment.

Col. ONSLOW: The speaker, the vice-chairman party went on board the steamer, the Hunter River Company's steamer National, and after presenting the medals, the crew of the National gathered on the pier of the harbour. Several hundred guests were on board the steamer, which, after visiting the basin and the wharves along the river, returned to the wharf shortly after 6 p.m.

THE GOVERNOR ON TOUR.

PUBLIC RECEPTION.

GREAT-HEARTED AUSTRALIANS.

NEWCASTLE. Thursday. His Excellency Lord Chelmsford, K.C.M.G., State Governor of New South Wales, and Lady Chelmsford, were received with a hearty welcome to-day. The wish, which necessarily had to be postponed so often, has been looked forward to by the citizens of the port for the past few weeks, with feelings of pleasurable anticipation. The streets of the city were gaily decorated with strings of bunting this morning, and a large gathering of citizens clustered round the eastern exit of the railway station, when a platform decked with many flags had been erected in Water-street, and from which the address of welcome was to be delivered.

The Governor and Lady Chelmsford were met at the station by the Mayor, Alderman J. C. Reid, and the Mayoress, Mrs. Reid, the Alderman of the City Council, and a large number of other prominent clergymen and laymen, and Lady Chelmsford mounted the decorated platform, accompanied by the Mayor and Mayoress, Mr. E. Scott Holland, the town clerk, read a complimentary address from the various schools in the district, under Captain Craig, while a picked band selected from the Newcastle cadets' bands at Cook's Hill, Wickham, and Hamilton Public Schools played the National Anthem. After a short service, the Governor and Mayoress, and Lady Chelmsford mounted the decorated platform, accompanied by the Mayor and Mayoress, Mr. E. Scott Holland, the town clerk, read a complimentary address from the various schools in the district, under Captain Craig, while a picked band selected from the Newcastle cadets' bands at Cook's Hill, Wickham, and Hamilton Public Schools played the National Anthem. MINING.

SILVER QUIET BUT STEADY.

COPPER FIRM, BULLFINCHES WEAK. The announcement that the zinc conversion has been renewed for another three years did not have any appreciable effect upon the market yesterday morning. This was a surprise to some operators, noting that the removal of the zinc from the market, a great deal to the miners of Broken Hill, where the zinc industry is now almost overpowering the lead industry. But for the fact that Adelaide mining operators are engaged in an exciting chase after Bullfinches, it is almost certain that, in the absence of such an attraction, the lead movement in Liverpool shares would have been more active.

But though the shareholders of the renewed agreement were not followed by any such movement locally in Broken Hill shares, it was apparent that holders of Barrier scrip were pleased at the news. Buyers could quote as weakly as they pleased, but sellers did not seem to be in a position to demand down prices. The transactions recorded were limited to B. H. Junction North, which held firm at 17/9; B. H. Junctions, which steadily, at 4/1; and B. H. Zinc, which had been reduced a fraction; H. H. South, paid and contributing, B. H. South Blocks, Amalgamated and Sulphide Corporations were firmly held, while Bullfinches' price was in request, but sellers did not declare.

The feature of the business recorded in the copper market was a strong forward movement in Mount Elliott, due to the strength of a firm London demand. Sales were booked at £5/5 to £5/6/6. Sales of 4/6. Childers, which had been a shade better of the previous day's was paid, but Bullfinches received a little, whilst Tongwong Minerals came from 14/2 to 15/6. Good offers were made for Grevillea, Gulgong, and Kangaroo Mines, with a few inquiries for Cambungle and Hampden. Mount Morgan was quoted very wide.

The most noticeable feature in the Bullfinch group, indeed, the sales hook indicated a weak feeling abroad. Other gold stocks were quiet, with Mount Dredge, casting shade, whilst No. 2 South Great Eastern, impeded. Generally speaking, there was not much vitality in New South Wales, Queensland, Victoria, and Australian gold stocks, whilst tin shares were not in a position to move.

The most noticeable feature of a quiet afternoon was the strong support accorded to H. H. Zinc, which had been in better demand. The silver division was quiet. The same was the case with tin shares, whilst the Bullfinch group was very much in the background.
